MOUNTAIN MAN

Mack Brown and his new coaching staff at Appalachian State University set the third week of January 1983 as their first big recruiting weekend after Brown officially began work in Boone just after the first of the year. They got about a dozen recruits safely ensconced in the opulent Broyhill Inn on the top of a crest overlooking the campus on Friday night and were ready for a full slate of tours, flesh-pressing and wooing the 17-year-olds on the idea of playing football for the Mountaineers.

They woke up Saturday morning to a foot of snow.

"Some of us came from Iowa, where it snowed all the time," remembers Sparky Woods, the offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach. "But we thought we were moving south. And here nobody's ready for a foot of snow. Fortunately, some of the administrators had four-wheel drives, so we made the best of it we could."

One after the other, the prospects told Brown, "Coach, I can't do this. It's freezing."

Brown's prize target was a running back from Reidsville who most schools were recruiting as a fullback. Brown wanted John Settle as a tailback.

"Coach, I've always wanted to play in the snow," Settle said. "I think that would be so cool."

"Thank you, God," Brown thought to himself.

Nearly 40 years later, Brown thinks Settle might have been the only recruit the Mountaineers landed from that weekend. But what a big one, as Settle went on to rush for 4,409 yards over four years in Boone, play six years in the NFL and make a career out of coaching running backs in the NFL, Big Ten and SEC.

And thus the first domino in Brown's head coaching career fell to be followed by Tulane (1985-87), Carolina (1988-97), Texas (1998-2013) and back to Carolina again in 2019.

APPALACHIAN STATE

⏬ FOOTBALL HEAD TO THE MOUNTAINS OF BOONE

- Carolina visits Appalachian State on Saturday, Sept. 3 in just the third all-time meeting between the two in-state schools and the first game held in Boone.
- The Tar Heels earned a 56-16 home win over the Mountaineers in the season opener of the 1940 season.
- In 2019, the Mountaineers picked up a 34-31 victory in Kenan Stadium.
- Mack Brown was the Appalachian State head coach in 1983 and Senior Advisor to the Head Coach Sparky Woods served as head coach from 1984-88 in Boone after working on Brown's staff in '83.
- Coach Brown will go against the Mountaineers for just the second time in his illustrious coaching career.
- The first occurrence was the 34-31 setback in 2019.
- Drake Maye became the first Tar Heel QB to throw five touchdown passes in a starting debut and the first to ever toss five in a season-opening game when he did so against Florida A&M last Saturday night.

BASKETBALL: TAR HEELS DRIBBLE FOR A GREAT CAUSE

The UNC men's and women's basketball teams spend lots of time dribbling, but Sunday morning that basic skill took on new meaning. The Tar Heels joined fellow Carolina squads and community members for the school's first Dribble for Victory Over Campus event, raising funds for pediatric cancer research.
